

Broadcasts At Clarkson News Room

Potsdam — The Inter College Radio Network at Clarkson College of Technology started broadcasts from its new News Room in Lewis House at 6:00 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 3.

The new studio, built by the college and equipped and operated by the Inter College Radio Network, has effective sound proofing as well as viewing facilities for visitors. During each evening, a total of approximately one hour of news broadcasts is distributed through radio lines to WNTC and WCCT, member stations of the network.

Leon Smith, ICRN news director, said today, "This news facility in Lewis House provides for better news broadcasts. It also gives students an opportunity to read the latest news direct off the wires of the United Press International."

The Inter College Radio Network has invited students, faculty and townspeople to visit the news room on the second floor of Lewis House where they can read the latest news, weather, and ski reports as they are posted hourly on a four foot by eight foot glass window.
